CHAIR'S LETTER

Dear Members:

It has been another busy year for the CGSG. Following on a successful series of sessions at the Boston Meetings last April, our members have demonstrated their continued commitment to the group's collective efforts by organizing another great line-up for 2009 Meetings in Las Vegas. CGSG has sponsored or co-sponsored a total of 28 sessions for these meetings, which is the largest number to date and testimony to the growing research interest in China geography. We have provided in this Newsletter a list of the CGSG-sponsored sessions to give everyone a preview of what to expect. You will notice that many of the session organizers have arranged for co-sponsorship with other specialty groups and a number of the sessions include panelists who work outside of China. These efforts will help with expanding the community of geographers engaged in China-related research as well as providing opportunities for comparative dialogue and theoretical interventions. Thanks again to everyone for their help in bringing together what looks to be an exciting and wide-ranging set of sessions for Las Vegas.

The AAG will make the preliminary schedule available sometime in January. We will send an email out to members with information on the CGSG Business Meeting and the group dinner. The Meeting is open to all members, and is where we announce our award winners, discuss new initiatives and issues of interest to the group, and identify potential topics for the following year's AAG. The meeting and dinner have always offered a nice opportunity to catch up with old friends and to meet new members. Everyone is encouraged to join in both.

As mentioned in the previous newsletter, the AAG has recently created a new membership program that allows geographers from developing regions to join the Association at a discounted rate. There is now a Chinese language description of the program available online, and the AAG has also begun to create a web page listing geography programs and associations in other regions of world, including Asia. Details on these can be found on page 12 of the newsletter. We would like to thank Chen Shuang, Cindy Fan, George Lin, Larry Ma, Yu Zhou, Alana Boland, and Qihao Weng for their assistance in the production of the Chinese version of the pamphlet. The AAG is very grateful for our group's help with this new outreach initiative and we encourage everyone to share this information with colleagues working in China and other eligible countries who may not have yet joined the AAG due to costs.

This Newsletter includes valuable information on upcoming meetings, CGSG awards, and member news. We have also included a tribute to Professor C. P. Lo, a long-time member of the CGSG and friend of many working in the China geography field. He passed away in December 2007, and as evident in the words of his former colleagues and students, he will be missed and forever remembered.

Finally, on behalf of other members of the CGSG executive, I would like to wish everyone a happy new year. We look forward to seeing you in Las Vegas in a few months time!

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS TO CGSG ANNUAL STUDENT PAPER AWARDS

The China Geography Specialty Group sponsors an annual award to recognize distinguished student research and paper presentation in a CGSG-sponsored session at the annual AAG conference.

Eligibility:

- Student members of the CGSG at all academic levels (undergraduates or graduate students) are qualified.
- The student must be the sole author and presenter of the paper.
- Multiple submissions to more than one specialty groups for a Student Paper Award is NOT allowed. Papers being considered by other AAG Specialty Groups for student paper awards are not qualified for the CGSG Student Paper Award.
- Participants must have submitted the abstract and appropriate program participation fee to the AAG for participation at the AAG Annual Meeting in Las Vegas, March 22-27, 2009.

Award:

A $250 prize will be awarded for the best paper, in addition to an award certificate and prepaid lunch at the AAG Awards Luncheon. Two Travel Awards of $100 each will go to the First and Second Runner-up. A committee of faculty from the China Geography Specialty Group will evaluate the papers. Evaluation criteria for the award include the originality of the research, the soundness and creativity of the research design and methodology; the validity of conclusions; and quality of the presentation. The award will be announced at the Business Meeting of the China Geography Specialty Group in Las Vegas in March 2009, and published in the CGSG and AAG newsletters.

Guidelines for Submission: To be considered for the competition, authors should e-mail a copy of the paper's title and abstract to the CGSG Chair by February 1, 2009. Please include author's name, academic level (undergraduate, master's or doctoral), academic institution, department or program, current address, phone number, and E-MAIL. An electronic version of the paper, in Word format, must reach the Chair no later than February 24, 2009.

CGSG SERVICE AWARD CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

At its 2003 business meeting in New Orleans, CGSG decided to launch an Outstanding Service Award. This award is to be presented to individuals who provided significant services to the China Geography Specialty Group or made important contributions to the advancement of China geography studies. Since then, Professors Larry Ma, Clifton Pannell, Chor-Pang Lo, Jack Williams, and Cindy Fan have received this award. At its 2007 business meeting in San Francisco, CGSG decided to change the Outstanding Service Award from an annual event into an ad hoc basis.

Nominations, if any, are now accepted for this award. Please send your nomination, along with a statement of contributions of the nominee(s) to:

Alana Boland, Chair, CGSG (Email: boland@geog.utoronto.ca) before February 1st, 2009.

CGSG-SPONSORED SESSIONS AT THE 2009 AAG ANNUAL MEETING, LAS VEGAS

The following paper and panel sessions have been sponsored by CGSG. The presenting author is listed first, with names of co-authors included where information was available. Please accept our apologies in advance for any errors or omissions. Paper abstracts and final listings will be posted on the AAG website in early 2009. Note that there will also be individual China-based papers in other thematic sessions, not to mention a few China sessions organized by the AAG Program Committee. You will be able to use the AAG online schedule to search for these other presentations.

NEWS FROM MEMBERS

Alana Boland (University of Toronto) has edited a special issue of the journal Asian Geographer that brings together new research on environment and development in China. Many of the papers were presented in CGSG-sponsored sessions at the San Francisco AAG Meetings in 2007. A list of the articles has been included in the Newsletter. Alana was promoted to associate professor last July and will be a research fellow at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center for five months starting this coming February. While at the Center, she will be continuing her research on urban environmental governance in Nanjing and nearby cities.

Kam Wing Chan (U of Washington) has recently co-authored a paper "Is China Abolishing the Hukou System?" in The China Quarterly. He continues to do research on migration, urbanization, and the hukou system, and is completing another three papers, including one entitled: China's Hukou System at 50. He is helping edit the first English version of China Population and Labor Yearbook, to be jointly published by Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and Brill, Netherlands. He has traveled quite a bit in the last few months, including to Africa for the first time, attending the IGU Urban Commission Conference and Congress in Tunis in August; giving a public lecture on hukou reforms in September in Hong Kong; and attending the World Economic Forum Summit on Global Agenda in November in Dubai, a very interesting city built in the desert. He has been a member of the Forum's Global Agenda Council on Migration since spring this year. Details about the Summit are at

<http://www.weforum.org/en/events/ArchivedEvents/InauguralSummitontheGlobalAgenda/index.htm>

[Note: The article by Kam Wing Chan and William Buckingham that appeared in China Quarterly was one of the journal editor's "Best Picks of 2008." Congratulations to Kam Wing and William!]

Chuanbo Chen (Renming University of China) is a British Academy Visiting Fellow in 2008 (UK host: IDS). His recent research grants/awards include: (1) Protecting the rural poor against the economic consequences of major illness: A challenge for Asian transitional economics, by EU, 2006-2008; (2) The vulnerability and coping strategies of the poor rural households under the shock, by National Natural Science Foundation, 2007-2009; and (3) The Research on Establish the Social Safety net in China, by National Planning Office Philosophy and Social Science, 2007-2008.

Philippe Foret (University of Nottingham) has been appointed as an associate professor at the new School of Contemporary Chinese Studies. His email address is: philippe.foret@nottingham.ac.uk. With Andreas Kaplony (University of Zurich), Philippe has published this November, "The Journey of Maps and Images on the Silk Road", see for details at: <http://www.brill.nl/default.aspx?partid=210&pid=30913>.

Ron Knapp (SUNY New Paltz) is the author of Chinese Bridges: Living Architecture from China's Past, with photography by A. Chester Ong and a Foreword by Peter Bol, Harvard University. Singapore: Tuttle Publishing, 2008. The book is a companion volume to his Chinese Houses: The Architectural Heritage of a Nation (2005) and Chinese Houses in Southeast Asia: Eclectic Architecture, which will be published in 2009. Sponsored by the Gamma Theta Upsilon/Association of American Geographers Visiting Geographical Scientist Program, he spoke on "Discovering China's Historic Bridges" at the University of Notre Dame and Bethel College in Indiana on November 18, 2008.

Ingo Liefner received the following research grants: "Knowledge Absorption and International Competitiveness: An Analysis of China's Optical Technology Sector" (together with Stefan Hennemann, funded by the German Research Foundation), and "Regional agility and upgrading and in Hong Kong and the PRD (together with Stefan Hennemann, Frauke Kraas, Javier Revilla Diez, Daniel Schiller, Dirk Dohse, Dean Spinanger, Ruediger Soltwedel, funded by the German Research Foundation).

Di Long (Texas A&M University) just came to the U.S to start his new research journey, after obtaining his bachelor degree in Tsinghua University in 2005 and a master degree of physical geography in Institute of Geographic Sciences and Natural Resources Research, Chinese Academy of Science in 2008. His research interests primarily lie in the areas of evapotranspiration estimation using remotely sensed data and hydrological modeling, with related areas like land use/cover change and global warming. This year, he has co-authored two papers: (1) Gao, Y.C., Long, D, Li, Z.L. (2008). Estimation of daily actual evapotranspiration from remotely sensed data under complex terrain over the upper Chao river basin in North China. International Journal of Remote Sensing, 29(11), 3295-3315. (2) Gao, Y.C. Long, D. (2008). Intercomparison of remote sensing-based models for estimation of evapotranspiration and accuracy assessment based on SWAT. Hydrological Processes, 22, 4850-4869.

Darrin Magee (Hobart & William Smith Colleges), as a Co-PI, has secured $750,000 NSF grant to study social, ecological, and geopolitical impacts of large dams in China (along with colleagues at Colby College, Oregon State, and Yunnan University in China. Darrin participated in the Third Annual Shantou Dialogues on Sustainable Development in China, sponsored by the Li Ka Shing Foundation. His recent publications include: Brown, Philip, Darrin Magee, Yilin Xu. (2008). Socioeconomic vulnerability in China's hydropower development. China Economic Review 19 (4), pp. 614-627. doi: 10.1016/j.chieco.2008.06.002; Brown, Philip, Desiree Tullos, Bryan Tilt, Darrin Magee, and Aaron Wolf. "Beyond Three Gorges: Nu River Hydropower and Energy Decision Politics in China," Asian Geographer.

Aloe Yu Luo Rioux (Primary Source) received her Ph. D from the University of Colorado at Boulder in the Spring of 2008. She recently joined Primary Source (www.primarysource.org) as Program Director for the China/Asia Programs. Based in Massachusetts, Primary Source is a non-profit organization promoting education for global understanding by offering high-quality professional development and curriculum resources to K-12 teachers and school communities. The paper entitled: "Pilgrim or Tourist? Transformation of China's Revolutionary Holy Land" by Rioux, will appear as a chapter in Faiths on Display: Religion and Tourism in China (Forthcoming, Tim Oakes and Donald S. Sutton, eds. Rowman & Littlefield), and her other article, "Green with Red: Environment and Jiangxi's Tourism Development," will be published in the upcoming themed issue of Asian Geographer on environment and development in China. Rioux is also a contributing writer for Berkshire Encyclopedia of China (Forthcoming. Linsun Cheng et al., eds. MA: Berkshire Publishing Group LLC) and Encyclopedia of Modern China (Forthcoming. David Pong, ed. MI: Charles Scribner's Sons/Gale/Cengage Learning).

Yifei Sun (California State University, Northridge) is co-editing two special issues for the International Journal of Technology Management (IJTM) and GeoJournal. The IJTM special issue focuses on China's New Innovation-oriented Strategy and the GeoJournal special issue concentrates on Asian manufacturing. The review process for both is almost completed and we expect to publish the two issues in late 2009.

Yifei Sun also travelled to China during the summer and in late October. He conducted many interviews with ICT firms at Shanghai. Meanwhile, he attended a few conferences including the one on Industry Cluster hosted by Henan University in June and the conference on technology innovation hosted by Zhejiang University in October. In addition, he was invited to give a few guest presentations on his research at Zhejiang University, East China Normal University, Henan University, and Shanghai Normal University. Recently, he successfully organized a forum on China on campus. For those interested, pls visit the website at:
<http://www.csun.edu/~ys9503/Chinaforum/Chinaforum.htm>.

For the coming AAG conference at Las Vegas, he is co-organizing a few sessions on latecomer technological upgrading and global production networks (global value Chains) with Dr Peilei Fan from Michigan State University) and Dr. Sharmistha Bagchi-Sen from SUNY Buffalo. We are exploring the possibility to publish a special issue with a journal. For those who are interested to contribute, but were not able to participate in our sessions, please contact them directly.

Stanley Toops (Miami University) is on leave in Seattle this year. Recent publications include a chapter in the third edition of Understanding Contemporary China. Robert Gamer, ed. Rienner: Boulder CO, 2008.

Qihao Weng (Indiana State University) was recently awarded a NASA senior fellowship, which allows him to take a research leave working on the environmental impacts of urbanization and public/environmental health. He did a lot of travel in China during the summer 2008, visiting several universities/research institutes, giving lectures, but most significantly organizing an international workshop on Earth Observation and Remote Sensing Applications in Beijing (about 200 participants from 20 nations). In addition to a number of publications in remote sensing and GIS, he published "A historical perspective of river basin management in the Pearl River Delta of China, Journal of Environmental Management, 85(4): 1048-1062, 2007. He also wrote an entry of "Guangzhou (Canton)" for Encyclopaedia of Modern China, Farmington Hills, MI: Charles Scribner's Sons.

Christian Wuttke (University of Osnabrueck, Germany) published an article with Michael Waibel, "The evolution of local state capacity and institutional change in East Asian megaurban regions: the case of the Pearl River Delta, China", CEU Political Science Journal, 2008, Vol. 3 (2), 230-251.

Anthony Yeh, Academician of the Chinese Academy of Sciences and world-renowned scholar of The University of Hong Kong (HKU), was selected the winner of the 2008 UN-HABITAT Lecture Award - the highest international acclaims in the town planning field. The award is to recognize outstanding and sustained contribution to research, thinking and practice in human settlements development and planning. A pioneer in the application of geographic information system (GIS) technologies to urban and regional planning and a world renowned scholar on urban development and planning in Hong Kong and China, Professor Yeh is awarded for his widespread influence on human settlements research and policy formulation within Hong Kong, the Mainland China and across the Asia-Pacific Region.

Professor Yeh was presented the award in Nanjing, at the UN-HABITAT's Fourth World Urban Forum (WUF IV) on November 4, where he was invited to deliver a lecture before international experts and academics. The Forum, a biennial summit forum of urban development in the world and top conference concerning human habitat, is established by the United Nations to examine one of the most pressing global issues – rapid urbanization and its impact on communities, cities, economies and policies; as well as to tackle the challenges of minimizing burgeoning poverty in cities, and achieving sustainable urban growth and development. At the 4-day Forum entitled "Harmonious Urbanisation", Professor Yeh spoke on "GIS as a Planning Support System for the Planning of Harmonious Cities".

Yu Zhou (Vassar College) published her article: "Synchronizing export orientation with import substitution: creating competitive indigenous high-tech companies in China," World Development. Vol. 36, No. 11, Nov. 2008. She also participated in a four day workshop in Washington DC with other public intellectual fellows selected by National Committee on US-China relations. The workshop includes a series of meetings with Washington political and media establishments on foreign relations. In Dec. 2008, she served for the national screen committee for Fulbright fellowship to China.

IN MEMORY OF PROFESSOR C.P. LO

Chor-pang “C.P.” Lo, 1939-2007 Chor-pang “C.P.” Lo died on December 30, 2007 in Athens, Georgia following a long illness with lung cancer. At the time of his death he was Professor of Geography at the University of Georgia where he had been teaching since 1984.

Dr. Lo was born and raised in Hong Kong. He received the B.A. with First Class Honors from the Department of Geography and Geology, University of Hong Kong in 1963 and the M.A. three years later in 1966. As a number of his former classmates and HKU students have testified, a First Class Honors degree from Hong Kong University in the 1960s was a remarkable scholarly accomplishment that only the truly exceptionally meritorious students earned. He was awarded a Commonwealth Scholarship in 1968 and attended the University of Glasgow, Scotland where he pursued and completed Ph.D. studies in 1971 in photogrammetry and remote sensing with Professor Gordon Petrie.

Dr. Lo began his formal teaching career at Hong Kong University in 1967 as Assistant Lecturer and quickly moved through the ranks of Lecturer and Senior Lecturer. In July, 1977, he was appointed Reader in Geography, a position he held until 1984 when he left for the University of Georgia, where he had served previously as visiting scholar in 1976. He returned several times to Hong Kong University and served there as visiting professor in the fall term, 2002.

Former students of Dr. Lo recall his hard work and dedication as a faculty member at HKU. Both Tung Fung and Kam Wing Chan recall with great respect and fondness that Dr. Lo, as he was then called, was their first geography teacher at HKU. They were in awe of the remarkable detail and skill with which Dr. Lo lectured and the value of the material that he presented in his lectures. Serious students viewed Dr. Lo as demanding and requiring good effort and hard work. But as Chan stated, these same students had enormous respect for Dr. Lo and knew that they would be held to a very high standard of achievement in his courses while also learning a great deal from him, a challenge for the best and brightest at HKU. Both of these former students are now senior professors in distinguished departments, and both have given thoughtful testimonials to the profound impact C.P. Lo had on them personally and his caring and helpful assistance in their professional careers.

C.P. Lo was a remarkably innovative and productive teacher and scholar. He authored or co-authored 11 books all of which presented original and creative materials of great value to students, teachers, and professional colleagues. In addition, he published more than 70 articles many of which appeared in the most prestigious and competitive refereed journals in geography and related fields. He also received numerous research grants to support his work from the National Science Foundation (NSF), the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), the National Geographic Society (NGS) and other sources.

His scholarly contributions were especially noteworthy for the breadth of his academic interests while also relying on technical specialties such as photogrammetry, remote sensing, and geographic information science and systems. Two of his textbooks, Applied Remote Sensing and Concepts of Geographic Information Systems were widely used and highly respected and became standards in the field. The breadth of Lo’s scholarly and intellectual interests ranged from population geography to an enduring fascination and interest in his home region of southeast China, the Pearl River Delta. Some of his early research focused on population studies of Hong Kong and the Pearl River Delta, and he continued his work on the changing land use of this region both urban and rural throughout his professional life. His contributions to improved understanding of these land use changes and related economic developments has been recognized both within and outside China. In 1990 he authored a book on Hong Kong, a subject that remained dear to him throughout his life.

C.P. Lo’s tenure at the University of Georgia will be remembered for several noteworthy achievements. He came first as a visiting scholar in residence, 1976, where he vigorously pursued cutting edge research on land use in China using newly released satellite data from the Landsat-1 earth satellite. In 1984 he returned and joined the faculty as associate professor and was later promoted to full professor. His teaching in both technical subject such as remote sensing, photogrammetry and GIS as well as in human geography contributed significantly to the instructional program in the department. He continued his profound interest in the geography of China and enjoyed teaching the department’s China course where he delivered a rigorous and serious class for advanced undergraduates and graduate students.

Lo’s teaching interests were reflected strongly in his research and scholarly activities. He maintained an active and very productive research program that employed remote sensing and GIS techniques with applications in both local study areas such as Atlanta, although most of his research work was focused on study areas in China. In both venues, C.P. was typically at the cutting edge and often attracted interest from the press as well as the scholarly community. Examples would be his pioneering work on estimating populations in Chinese cities in the 1970s based on remote sensing sources and mathematical estimations at a time when little accurate census information was available from China. More recent work on the large city, Atlanta, and its heat island effect again using remote sensing data received notice from the press as well attracting considerable attention and kudos among academic colleagues.

C.P. Lo was greatly admired and respected by a generation of students at the University of Georgia, more than 30 of whom he advised and directed in their graduate studies. Known as a rigorous and demanding mentor, he was also seen as understanding and compassionate to those students who were willing to work hard even when their technical competencies were not quite up to his standard. Many of his students have advanced to significant faculty positions of their own, and he took great pride in their accomplishments and remained very interested in their careers and their scholarly directions.

For example, Qihao Weng was drawn to the University of Georgia for doctoral work owing to the presence of Dr. Lo. He took a number of his courses and served as a teaching assistant for Lo. C.P. also was Qihao's major professor and directed his Ph.D. studies. Qihao has commented on the importance of Dr. Lo in obtaining National Geographic funding for doing collaborative field work in the Pearl River Delta with C.P. and the seminal influence C.P. had in urging Qihao to combine and integrate remote sensing and GIS approaches to this geographic research and scholarship. Qihao has continued this research theme in his own work and attributes much of his academic success to the assistance of C.P. Lo and the scholarly inspiration he provided in stimulating and galvanizing Qihao's early efforts to investigate and explore the synergies between remote sensing and GIS.

C.P. was an avid badminton player, and his many students and friends remember him fondly for his regular visits to the Ramsey Student Center for badminton games. He brought a considerable energy and enthusiasm for the game, and this was a significant recreational activity and outlet for him. He will also be remembered affectionately by a number of his colleagues with whom he had lunch regularly at the University of Georgia Faculty Center almost to the very end of his life.

During his career C.P. Lo received a number of honors and awards. These included the William Owens Award for Creative Research given by the University of Georgia, the medal for Outstanding Contributions to the Science of Remote Sensing and the discipline of Geography by the Remote Sensing Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers (AAG), the Outstanding Service Award of the China Geography Specialty Group of the AAG, and the Research Honors Award and the Lifetime Service Award of the Southeast Division of the AAG.

C.P. Lo was a loyal and loving family man who took great interest and pride in the activities and accomplishments of his wife and son. He is survived by his widow, Ms. Christine Lo of Athens, GA and his son, Dr. Wai-Kit Lo, M.D. of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Clifton W. Pannell, University of Georgia with assistance from Professors Kam Wing Chan, University of Washington; Tung Fung, Chinese University of Hong Kong; George Lin, University of Hong Kong; and Qihao Weng, Indiana State University.

GRANTS AND AWARDS

Each year, the AAG offers numerous grants and awards to geographers, including students. Members of the CGSG are encouraged to apply. Unless otherwise noted, all deadlines are December 31, 2008. Please consult listing and full descriptions for these grants posted on the AAG website at: www.aag.org/grantsawards/index.cfm

CHINA GEOGRAPHY SPECIALTY GROUP WEBSITE

Be sure to visit our website at: http://people.uleth.ca/~wei.xu/AAG_China/cgsg.htm Past newsletters and the timeline are posted there.

The CGSG Timeline was prepared in response to a request from the AAG Central Office. The purpose is to present a record of the activities that CGSG initiated and the contributions that members have made in promoting the study of China geography since the group's inception. We thank those of our members who have provided us with valuable information for the Timeline. We hope members will continue to send us information from the past, as well as keep us updated on recent achievements and contributions. For publications, please send information only for books, monographs and special issues of journals, but not articles (as there would be too many of them to include). The url for the latest version of the Timeline is:

Please review and send information on additions or changes to yuzhou@vassar.edu.

OTHER WEB RESOURCES

The China Geography Listserv was set up a few years ago by Yehua Dennis Wei (wei@geog.utah.edu). The listserv is for informal communications among AAG and non-AAG China geographers. It has now been relocated to the University of Utah. Please go to <http://lists.csbs.utah.edu/listinfo.cgi/chinageography> for instructions on how to subscribe to the listserv.

The AAG has established a website to promote its new Developing Regions Membership Program: <http://www.aag.org/Developing/index.htm>. A Chinese language version of the program's pamphlet is now available there. The AAG has also set up a listing of geography departments and scholarly associations in the "Resources" section of the Asia page (<http://www.aag.org/Developing/Asia/index.htm>). The AAG invites members to provide additions and corrections to help ensure that these lists are up-to-date and comprehensive for every region. Suggestions should be emailed to: developingregions@aag.org

CONFERENCE AND WORKSHOP NEWS

Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, is hosting the Midwest Conference on Asian Affairs, October 16-18, 2009. Proposal deadline July 2009. Stanley Toops (toopssw@muohio.edu) is organizing a panel on China/Asia Geography. For more info on the conference, contact: Dr. Mieko Ono, East Asian Studies Committee, Dept. Of German Russian and East Asian Languages, Oxford, Ohio 45056, onom@muohio.edu

The 23rd Annual Meeting of the Society for Conservation Biology, Conservation: Harmony for Nature and Society, will be held from 11-16 July in Beijing, China. Abstracts for oral, speed, and poster presentations can be submitted 6 November 2008 to 21 January 2009. For more information please see: <http://www.conbio.org/> (Contributed by William Forbes, Assistant Professor of Geography, Stephen F. Austin State University Box 13047 SFA Station, Nacogdoches, Texas 75962, 936-468-2373)

The Tenth Asian Urbanization Conference will be held at the University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong SAR, People's Republic of China from 16 to 19 August 2009. Conference Themes: Theoretical or empirical studies on urban form and process, urban population change including migration, urban systems, quality of life, sustainable development, city marketing and economic development, social justice, urban governance, applications related to GIS, comparative urbanization, and environmental conditions in Asian cities. Other papers which contribute to an understanding of Asian urbanization are welcomed. Deadline for submission of abstracts is February 15, 2009. One local technical tour within Hong Kong SAR that features new towns, infrastructures, urban renewal projects will be arranged. An optional field trip (overnight) to Shenzhen / Pearl River Delta region will be arranged at additional cost. Detailed information of the conference is available at www.hku.hk/asia2009. Please contact the Conference Organizer, Professor Anthony G. O. Yeh or Dr. Roger C. K. Chan of the University of Hong Kong, or Dr George Pomeroy (Asian Urban Research Association (AURA) Secretary-General) if further information is needed.

The University of Toronto's Asian Institute invites applications for a dissertation workshop on Social Capital and Civic Engagement in Asia. The workshop is intended for doctoral students whose dissertation projects concern the role of civic engagement and social capital, in its many variations, in fostering dynamic change in any part of contemporary Asia. The purpose of the workshop is to encourage and assist doctoral students who are just beginning work on these issues, as well as those who are farther along in their projects. The workshop will take place May 3-6, 2009 on the campus of the University of Toronto. It will include twelve students and four faculty members from a variety of disciplines and interdisciplinary fields. The Asian Institute at the University of Toronto will cover the costs of work, meals, and accommodation. Travel will be subsidized up to a maximum of CDN$600 per participant. Application deadline is January 30, 2009. Further details regarding the application process are available at: <http://webapp.mcis.utoronto.ca/ai/pdfdoc/Diss.Workshop.pdf>

CALL FOR PAPERS

Espaces - Populations - Sociétés, a France-based, peer-reviewed, international academic journal is looking for papers - written in English or French - for a thematic issue dealing with the general topic of China's populations. We would like to consider papers dealing with:

- China's demographics (sex-ratio at birth and its consequences, the growing number of elderly people...) and demographic policies (one-child policy's evolution...)
- perspectives on the history of China's population
- population mobility and migrations (rural-urban migration, the role of hukou, the place of mingong migrants, emigration abroad, return migrations to China...)
- urban population in China (definition of urban population, segregation in cities, housing in Chinese cities...)
- perspectives on special population (women, youth and students, elderly, gays and lesbians, ethnic minorities, foreigners, disabled populations...)
- geographical distribution of the population (relevance of the population density concept in contemporary China, areas of population decline, areas of frontier settlement, population and local resources...)
- linguistic geography (mandarin language and other forms of spoken Chinese, minorities' languages...)
- health geography of China (SARS, AIDS, health inequalities...)

The list of possible topics remains open.

Publication is expected in the year 2009. We would like to receive proposals for papers (100 to 200 words) before December 31, 2008. Specific requirements for the papers will be sent to interested potential contributors. Please send the proposals to yves.boquet@u-bourgogne.fr, or boquet.yves@wanadoo.fr

The journal (<http://geographie.univ-lille1.fr/index.php/eps.html>) publishes 4 thematic issues per year. Most papers in French but we occasionally host up to half an issue's papers in English. Among the recent issues:

- Diasporas and large metropolises,
- Borders, mobilities and their spatial effects,
- Populations in the Balkans
- Space, gender and societies.
- Populations, vulnerabilities and ecological inequalities
- Time and population temporalities

Headquartered at the department of geography of the University of Lille, in northern France, its editorial committee is made up of geographers, sociologists and demographers from French and Belgian universities. We recently had contributions from scholars based in the United States, Canada, Australia, United Kingdom, Czech Republic, etc. Many of them members of AAG, even members of CGSG. The journal is open to contributions from related fields such as anthropology, epidemiology, history, and so on.

Yves Boquet, professor of geography, Université de Bourgogne, Dijon, France
